

CIA 'Story' Sent Abroad, USIA Says

By the Associated Press

U.S. Information Agency Chief Leonard H. Marks says the USIA has been sending abroad accounts of CIA payments disclosures as the story develops.

"We have carried the news as it broke," he told a National Press Club luncheon yesterday.

As to whether the USIA would buy copies of William Manchester's forthcoming book on the death of President John F. Kennedy for its overseas readers, Marks said that would depend on the judgment of USIA's book reviewers.

He said he had not seen a manuscript of the book yet and that USIA's book reviewers read up to 1,500 books a year to decide which would be interesting enough to foreigners to warrant stocking in USIA's libraries around the world.
